His acting appearances include Band of Brothers, Black Books, Eastenders and The Cottage, working with directors such as Tom Hanks, Tom Hooper, Mike Leigh and actors including Simon Pegg, Jessica Hynes, Bill Bailey and Hayley Atwell.

He first heard and loved Woody's stand-up comedy in the '90s when his brother bought him the cassettes. A mere twenty years later he had the idea of performing the routines, playing sell out shows in London and Edinburgh for Woody fans and people discovering his early days as a stand-up and this brilliant material for the first time.

“mesmerising, like travelling back in time and seeing him live”

Jon Culshaw

“uncanny, fans of Allen and his 60s routines will love it” Time Out

“big laughs, the stand-up beautifully, vividly recreated”

Jason Solomons, film critic and author of “Woody Allen Film by Film”
